

Holiday, 2016

We're talking about Faith. No Fear. Using Faith to Move Forward.

The presidential election this year was deeply contentious and split America in ways that in modern society we didn't think was even possible. Lines were split across political parties, race, sexual orientation, religion and economic lines. When we take a look at it, the root of all of the discord is fear. We often fear the unknown. We have a decision to make will we put our faith in Fear or in God. In 2017, we are Moving in Faith Toward Our Purpose.

Whatever side of the fence you are on or who you voted for, we have a new President-elect in America who is determined to shake things up. As he appears to make decisions that are outside of normal protocol and use social media as his primary form of controlled public communication, many are increasingly fearful for their future and the future of the country. I have learned that the key to overcoming fear and worry is to exercise my faith. As a Christian, my faith in God has sustained me during even the toughest times. I know that no matter what happens in the world, nothing happens that God doesn't allow. At the end of the day HE is in control. As I looked at the many protests that began to spread even around the world post-election and watch the panic and fear across the faces of many, a quiet voice urged me to not be afraid, to humble myself, bow down and pray. God is in control. (2 Chronicles 7:14). That phrase became a sort of movement for me and the theme we are adopting for 2017; Moving in Faith toward our purpose. Last year we focused on purpose and the ways in which we can operate in it. For 2017, we are now fueling our momentum towards our purpose with our faith. Faith will not only move us closer to our purpose, but will sustain us when we realize our full purpose. True faith maintains us during those times when we can't see our purpose. (2 Cor. 5:7). This year we will focus on our faith to drive us to act despite our fears whether it's going for that new position, trying something we've never tried before or starting that new blog or business idea. Whatever it is, we are moving towards our purpose and using our faith to fuel it. Our goal is to inspire and encourage you to be your very best. We will offer additional products and resources to move you closer to your purpose. Get ready and get excited we are moving forward in Faith in 2017! .

Welcome to Our Holiday Newsletter!

Merry Christmas! Thank you for your support during these past three years! Where does the time go? I am so thankful for the growth that God has provided and the wonderful and talented people that I've had the honor of working with. Many of you realized your new career and I'm so excited for what God has for you in 2017! In this short newsletter I will share all of the new products that we rolled out this year and share what we have in store in 2017. It's all designed to keep you encouraged, inspired and motivated to pursue your purpose fueled by your faith. As many of you know I am a Christian and pray for each of you. My faith helped me through many difficult times where I wasn't sure how things were going to work out. As some of you know, my mother had some health issues and I had to make the decision to go to Indianapolis to help her heal and to make the difficult decision on what's next. It was challenging because it certainly wasn't something I planned on when I decided to go into business full-time. To be honest it was really difficult. I wasn't sure that I would be able to continue with the business and take care of her. I honestly thought I would have to quit and go back to work, but not even what I used to do because I wouldn't be able to work the strict 60-70 hours/week with limited flexibility for a company anymore. Most of the time I was just exhausted. But let me tell you, God is good. I've pulled many all-nighters working on the business in-between of taking care of her needs but when I think of her sacrifice throughout my life and how she devoted years to caring for my father before his death, she more than deserves someone to care for her now. I am thankful to God for her and for the energy and determination to continue with the purpose that He has instilled in me. Frankly, there were many times that I wasn't sure if I had it in me to keep going and I was in constant prayer. Not to mention that there was those who watched from afar and spread the word that I was no longer in business despite the fact that they received my regular social media posts and had an updated webpage. One thing you have to understand is that when you work in your true purpose, the haters may abound. It just comes with the territory. Be reminded that it's not as much about you as it is about them and how they feel about themselves. So just pray for them and keep focused on your journey ahead. Remember Psalms 23:5: "He prepares a table before me in the presence of my enemies...." You just have to love on them (from afar) because only hurting people hurt people.

My mom and Nephew, Mark at his HS graduation in 2009 - One week after my father passed.

I'm happy to say that my mom is doing much better, but it is evident that she will no longer be able to live alone. My hope is that I can complete getting her packed up and return to the DMV within the next few months. I was a little aggressive in setting my original date, but we should be able to move soon. The reason why I wanted to share my story is because some of you may be going through some disappointment or challenge that may seem impossible. In fact, it will happen, because the challenges and testing of your faith produces perseverance (James 1:3). So don't give up. You are not alone. Know that you have a God who loves you, so much so that He died for us. Also know that I am also praying for you. Remember: No Fear. Bow Down. Pray. We are moving in faith toward our purpose in 2017! Please reach out and let me know how I can help! Also, if you believe I have done good work for you, I would appreciate a recommendation from you on LinkedIn. It would help me tremendously! Enjoy the newsletter! Thanks for reading! Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

Sisters in Purpose – Holiday, 2016 Vonee Williams, songwriter

Humble. Unassuming. Kind. Thoughtful. Sincere. These are just a few words to describe Vonee during our interview. While she has an impressive 180 songs in her catalog, and proud of her accomplishments, she genuinely just wants to give back. In this year's Holiday issue of Sisters In Purpose, Mrs. Williams shares how she discovered her purpose through surrendering to God and how he has been able to bless her. She will also share her own struggle with health issues that leave her doctors stumped as to why she is even having problems. Despite her serious health complications, her determination to persevere to pursue her dream will inspire all to keep going no matter what comes our way. Lastly, Vonee offers valuable insight on the business side of the music industry and what to expect when starting out. This is an interview you just don't want to miss! Read part one of the interview at www.netkient.com.

Don't be Afraid to Move Forward. Go Ahead for that Position!

What fear are you allowing to keep you from moving forward in your career? What are you telling yourself when you come across a position or goal that you are fully qualified for but keeps you from stepping out and doing it? Why is it easier to believe that you can't do it versus you can? It takes the same amount of energy so why not believe the positive?

The reaction I get when I ask new clients "What are you most proud of?" is usually an uncertain hesitation. It's as if they either do not see what they have accomplished as something to be celebrated or are uncomfortable with speaking about themselves. Often, they have to take a minute to think about what it is they are proud of. They shyly share an accomplishment but quickly dismiss it as insignificant. After I encourage them to share or elaborate, what once was uncertain or uncomfortable becomes a passionate, energetic discussion.

The reason why I ask this question is because it provides insight into the client's personality and what makes them excited which will also translate into their resume, during the interview and ultimately in the new position. So what are you waiting for? Your relevant experiences and accomplishments are valuable to a company. Know that you are a blessing! Realizing your contribution to a company will increase your confidence and marketability. So go for that position, speak up in that meeting, share your ideas! You just may surprise yourself with the result.

Always remember the value you bring to any company;
you'll never have to negotiate your confidence.

What is your plan for 2017?

When the gifts have been exchanged, tossed aside and all of the parties are over, what are you planning for the New Year?

- Will it be the same stale resolutions that stick for less than a month?
- Will you actually move into your purpose and finish the year differently and more positively than when it started?
- Who will you touch and make their lives better?
- What will you value more; acquiring more things or building meaningful relationships?
- Where will you place your faith; in wealth which is fleeting or an eternal kingdom?
- Will you accept your material blessings as an opportunity to be a blessing to others?

2017 Time to make a Difference. Time to Make A Positive Impact.
